THE "FIT" OF AN OVERCOAT

Is not, by any means, all that is required to make this garment in style. The fashion of the Overcoat this season is English, you know—and for the once it is agreeable to the best dressers in this country. The Overcoat this season for effectiveness depends upon the way it is draped upon the man who wears it. THIS EFFECT CAN ONLY BE SECURED IN MADE-TO-MEASURE GAR-MENTS.

Let us also show you what we offer you in Evening Wear, Full-dress Suits for gentlemen, at $35.

HARVARD OUTPLAYED

Yale Wins a Good Game of Football at Hampden Park.For the Seventeenth Time the Crimson Players Go Down Before the Rushes of the Boys in Blue.

SCORE AT THE FINISH 6 TO 0

Captain Waters and Seven Others More or Less Injured.25,000 People, Including Three Governors, Shiver and Shout During the Contest—Features of the Game.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 25.—Harvard was outplayed and outgeneraled on the Hampden Park gridiron by the eleven little boys in blue. The sons of game Yale won their seventeenth victory from the crimson boys by the score of 6 to 0. Not far from 25,000 people witnessed the great contest, including the Governors of three States—Russell of Massachusetts, McKinley of Ohio and Morris of Connecticut.

Butterworth, Yale's great full back, is the hero of the hour, for it was he who made the touchdown from which the goal was kicked. Not one among the thousands that wended their way to the park could deny look at a thermometer, lest the mercury should dissuade them from exposing their bodies to the blasts of the raw gale that was blowing from the north. From the players' standpoint it was an ideal day; but for the spectators it was uncomfortably cold, suggesting a double supply of overcoats.

The crowds began to pour into this bustling little city early in the afternoon.
Scores of special trains from all directions, in rapid succession, came into the Union Station. From New York city alone came nearly four thousand football enthusiasts, while the Boston specials were filled with thousands of crimson cohorts. As early as 12 o'clock the human tide was flowing park-ward. From that hour the seats under the nightglasses rapidly filled, and at 2 o'clock every seat had been taken and a thousand or more were glad of the privilege of standing within the inclosure. It was a magnificent spectacle, recalling the historical pictures of the Coliseum. The west side of the rectangle, where sat the Yale contingent, was a solid olive mass, their oriflammes of blue fluttering before the wind.

The air was vibrant with the concert of the collegians repeating the college yell or singing the ditties written for this occasion. It must be confessed that the Yale boys had the loudest lungs. Harvard scored the first touchdown in the preliminaries by sending skyward a ball of crimson and white, from which by a string depended the figure of a dog out of blue paper. The balloons sailed majestically away in the direction of New Haven. A crimson dog made of wool in the image of "Dan," Yale's mastiff, was also borne aloft on the Harvard side.

When Governor McKinley and wife appeared, accompanied by Lieutenant Governor Haile, of Massachusetts, and took seats on the Harvard side the enthusiasm of the crimson crowd was unbounded. But Governor Russell, of Massachusetts, was permitted to take his seat without a welcoming cheer. Governor Morris, of Connecticut, who naturally sat under a Yale banner, was also warmly welcomed.

The betting was light, no odds being asked or given just before the game began. The Yale men confessed their doubts about little Ade, who was no player at quarter back. It was evident that the Harvard men were more confident.

HARVARD NOT IN IT.

An old-time Yale ally announced the appearance of the blue gladiators in the arena at 2:05. Crimson cries went up a moment later when the Harvard eleven appeared, legs and jerseys gleaming in the crimson breed. The wind, which whistled down the Connecticut valley from the north was now blowing a miniature gale. Yale won the toss and chose the wind, giving Harvard the ball. Harvard hopes ran high when the crimson line was seen to left the flying wedge so successfully against the blue in the first five minutes of the game, but they fell after that, for Harvard was never in it. The first half ended without a score being made, but the Harvard men had exhausted themselves, and when play was resumed in the second half the boys in blue adopted the offensive game. Only twice during the entire game was the ball pushed into Yale's territory, and in each case the crimson defensive from start to finish. The Harvard boys grew fainter after Butterworth made his touchdown, and when Captain Waters was injured and obliged to retire from the field Harvard's cup of sorrow was filled with gloom. The Harvard line left the stands so that they should not see the finish. The game was less interesting than the struggle of last year for the spectators. It was also rougher, eight men being injured, and the Harvard line, Captain Waters, of Harvard, was incapacitated for service. The players lined up as follows:

Greenway.....Right end Beard.....Right tackle Hickok.....Right guard
McCreary.....Left guard Murphy.....Left tackle
Lynch.....Center
Ade.....Quarter back Thorne.....Right half back Armstrong.....Right half back Butterworth.....Full back

Stevenson.....Right end Newell.....Right tackle Lewis.....Right guard Acton.....Left guard
Emmons.....Left tackle
Beale.....Center
Wrightson.....Quarter back Waters (captain).....Right half back Brewer.....Right half back
Butterworth.....Full back

More than once the falling on the ball by Captain Hickey and Greenway saved Yale many yards. The Yale tackles did better than was expected of them, particularly Beard at right tackle. The fact that he showed up to better advantage than his colleague, Murphy, was largely due to the attention the Harvard men gave the latter. Yale's trio at center did yeoman's work, but showed up to much better advantage in offensive than defensive playing. Time and again they opened up holes in their opponents' line and stillman simply toyed with Lewis at center. Ade, at quarter, probably played nearly as well as Morris could have done, which is saying considerable, considering the lack of practice he has had this fall.

Armstrong and Thorne, while doing the equals of their opponents in these positions, Armstrong, particularly, showed up poorly for Yale, but this was more owing to the nature of the game than to any fault of his. He was called in to the crimson line Butterworth made a pretty run by Manahan, helped by Hickey's interference.

LEHIGH, 34 V. OF N. C. O.

A One-Sided Game with the Usual Number of Accidents.NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—It was the North against the South at Manhattan field this afternoon, when the football teams of Lehigh University and the University of North Carolina did battle. It was the first time the Southerners have appeared in this city, and three years since Lehigh last appeared and lost to the Tar Heels. The Tar Heels showed up surprisingly well after their long trip. It was a perfect day for the sport, and the field was in excellent condition. A very large crowd turned out to see the Lehigh-Carolina football game. The Lehigh team was composed of eleven players, and the Carolina team was composed of twelve players. The game was a close one, and
